REDWOOD CAMP MEETING 2021

Redwood Camp Meeting 2020

Not Happening Due to COVID-19

During an online meeting on April 7, the Redwood Camp Meeting Executive Board voted not to hold this summer's camp meeting due to the current public health crisis. The board also voted to close the campground to all groups through the end of the year and to revise the current budget to keep the camp operational until next year.

Redwood leaders and NCC administrators consider this development a pause – not an ending – to the ongoing camp meeting tradition. "We know that many people are disappointed with this painful decision, and the leadership is very sad, too" said Redwood Area Camp Director Harry Salvini. "For a long time, we were hoping that we could postpone the event, but that is not a feasible option, so we will begin focusing on 2021."

Virtual Camp Meeting a Possibility

Although campers may not be able to gather in the redwoods, Salvini hopes that they can still enjoy a time of spiritual refreshment and fellowship this summer. "We hope to put together a 'virtual camp meeting' online, and we'll be sending out more information in the future," he said.

Salvini asks campers to be patient as he and other Redwood leaders deal with current circumstances and ways to respond. "I am swimming in uncharted waters here," he said. "My water wings are not rated for deep waters, and I am asking for us to all pull together."

Appreciation for Our Campers

In the meantime, thank you for being a supporter of Redwood Camp Meeting. We love you all and stay safe!
